ATTENDING A CONCERT

Why attend

- Become educated on a different and important type of music
- A symphony is a feast for the senses and will leave you with a new experience
- The symphony is a step into the past and provides entertainment as well as some history
- The symphony is affordable and easy night out

Attire

- Dress comfortably
- Most dress in business or business casual, some more dressy
- Formal wear unusual unless concert is part of another event where formal attire is appropriate
- Opening night, many come more dressy – cocktail attire
- Summer concerts – casual

Arrival Time

- Classics and Pops concerts begin at 8:00 p.m.
- Plan to arrive at least 20 minutes early for parking, viewing the program, etc.
- Late arrivals will be seated by ushers at the next break in the performance
- Consider arriving at 7:00 p.m. for pre-concert interactive talk
 - 30-minute Preview Talk
 - Conducted by various people, including conductor, artist, musician, etc.
 - Seating on main floor (during the talk)

Parking

- Recommended parking at Plaza Tower Garage, corner of Park Center Drive and Anton Blvd, next to the Westin South Coast Plaza Hotel
- Valet service available for a fee in front of Segerstrom Concert Hall
- Public Transportation, including for disabled
 - www.octa.net ; Phone: 714-636-7433

Length of Concert

- Most are approximately 2 hours in length with an intermission
- Concerts generally include several selections
- Pops concerts generally feature Pops concert conductor for the first half, joined by special guest artist(s) for the second half
- Sunday Connections concerts are about 90 minutes with no intermission
- Checking concert program in advance will help determine exact length of individual programs

When to Clap

- Most works have three movements; clapping is appropriate at the end of the piece

- If unsure, look at the program page in the written program for the number of movements
- Or, wait until the conductor lowers his baton and turns around to the audience

Making Noise During the Concert

- To avoid coughing
 - Drink water before the concert
 - Be prepared with unwrapped coughing/throat lozenges (unwrapping during the concert can actually be quite noisy)
 - If you cannot avoid it, try to hold it until a loud portion of the music or near the end of the piece (a cough can be louder than any musical instrument!)
 - If it persists, consider leaving the hall (but remember, you will only be readmitted when there is an appropriate break in the performance)

Cell Phones and Other Electronic Devices

- Turn them off when in the concert hall
- No texting or photography of any kind is allowed

Intermission

- About 20 minutes
- Concessions are available in the lobby

Bringing Children

- Children are always welcome
- Be aware of the nature and length of the program, which may not be suitable for small children
- For small children, consider the Symphony's Family Musical Mornings and Symphony in the Cities summer series

What should I wear?

Concerts are meant to be a great social occasion and you should feel free to dress comfortably. Many people will wear business clothes or slightly dressy casual clothes, but you'll see everything from khakis with a nice shirt to dresses and suits. Some people enjoy dressing up and making

SYMPHONIC VOICES – OPERA VOCAL INITIATIVE

Program Goal

- Effort to restore professional productions of opera as an art form to Orange County began in 2011-12 season
- Carl St. Clair led the efforts to bring Opera to the forefront of musical interests. St. Clair provided the perfect leadership with his previous work in Europe.

Program Notes

- Inaugurated in 2012 to bring opera back to Orange County after closure of Opera Pacific
- The first production was "La Bohème" by Puccini and continued with a three-year plan, including adapted opera's geared towards children and the Family Musical Mornings
- "Tosca" by Puccini in the 2012-13 season sold out with the use of electronics to create images to go along with the music
- Alejandro Gutiérrez made his conduction debut with Pacific Symphony with two performances of "The Magical Flute" (2013)

- Facilitated by Maestro St. Clair's experience in opera
 - 2008 – 10 - Komische Oper Berlin
 - Led Verdi's "La Traviata," Wagner's "Ring Cycle," Reimann's "Lear" and others
 - 2008 – 10 - German National Theater and Staatskapelle
- Third family concert each season is "Opera for Kids"
- Community Partner – Chapman University
- 2019-2020 Season
 - Opera for Kids: Elixir of Love: January 18, 2020
 - Otello - April 23-28, 2020
 - Classics series with Pacific Chorale, Southern California Children's Chorus and soloists to be announced, Mahler's "Symphony of a Thousand" – June 11-13, 2020
- 2019 - Puccini's "Madame Butterfly", Ravel's "L'enfant et Les Sortileges, Pops series, "My Fair Lady"
- 2018 - "Die Fledermaus," "The Bat-Man's Revenge," Mozart's "The Magic Flute"
- 2017 - Verdi's "Aida"
- 2016 - Bizet's "Carmen"
- 2014 - Verdi's "La Traviata"
- 2013 - Puccini's "Tosca"
- 2012 - Puccini's "La Boheme"
- Third Family Concert each year – Opera for Kids
 - Partnership with Chapman University

John Forsyte -

"Orange County lost a jewel when Opera Pacific closed its doors. We don't intend to replace this fine company, but serve music lovers with semi-staged opera, which is a unique concert experience; it combines the power of a full symphony on stage with the singers and some of the theatrical drama so important to conveying opera's ultimate power."

Testimonials

- Jessica – high school student
 - As high school sophomore, volunteered at elementary school, teaching kids how to play trumpet
 - Requested to be assigned to one student who seemed to have special interest and one who seemed to be struggling in every aspect of school
 - Hoped music could help the first open up to their true passion and help the second one become more confident and hard-working
 - Targeted Title I School in the school district because likely the parents could not afford to pay for music lessons/education
 - School already had Class Act program – this would add to that
 - In junior year, develop program called Molding Musicians at King Elementary
 - Introduced 6 talented, dedicated high school volunteers to teach violin, piano, trumpet, trombone, flute and clarinet
 - Took on 20 students
 - In senior year, continued the program with co-leader (also a PYSO musician)
 - Four former teachers continued
 - Increased to 27 students
 - Added cello, guitar, saxophone
 - Goal for the program – continue and create a “Molding Musicians Board”
 - “Through this program I have had the chance to grow as a musician and a teacher and to help spread the joy of music to young students. I feel that...I have made footprints on each of the students’ lives.
- Thomas – Cellist
 - In first week at University of Chicago
 - Just a “kid” when joined PSYO
 - Participated in PYSO Bulgarian concert tour
 - His “burning enthusiasm to perform on a stage where music – not English – was the language used to communicate with audiences.”
 - “I remember those moments during rehearsals when things didn’t go the way we planned, where even if we put in the hours and the efforts, things just didn’t match up the way we wanted them to.
 - For me, this has been what PSYO – expanding my comfort zone and broadening my horizons to degrees I had never known before. From traveling to foreign places where I couldn't even speak the language, learning music at a level where I had to focus every day to learn the parts, and performing concerts with the professionalism and artistic expression of true musicians, I've grown out of my comfort zone and have gained a greater understanding of what it means to perform music.

Beyond the lifelong friends, wonderful conductors and cultured musical community that PSYO has afforded me, the greatest blessing has been a richer understanding of why I continue to pursue music as a medium for aesthetic human connection...and share a moment of private connectivity, all boundaries of race, language and gender fade away, leaving only the raw exchange of pure, human sentiment.

Thank you for teaching me the life lessons I could never learn through a textbook in a classroom."

- Danielle – Violinist
 - Now, a volunteer coordinator for the youth quartet
 - Top scholar – received highest possible scores on all six Advanced Placement exams taken in junior year
 - Taking 7 more AP classes in her senior year
 - Plans to attend medical school
 - Featured violinist (with younger sister) with Pacific Symphony "Symphony in the Cities" program under direction of Maestro Carl St.Clair
 - Also plays piano and tuba
 - Inspired by mother, early teachers, Music Director of Santiago Strings Irene Kroesen, Conductor of PSYO Roger Kalia, and Pacific Symphony Conductor Carl St.Clair
 - Concert mistress for PSYO, leading PYSO three-city concert tour of China in 2016
 - PSYO leadership "have truly impassioned me to be an artist, influencing me to love the orchestral repertoire and cherish the intimacy of great music-making with other phenomenal players in the Pacific Symphony Youth Ensemble."

Testimonials

- "Everyone here is so kind and supportive in what you do. I wasn't afraid to mess up (not as much) so I feel that I could try new things and not be judged. I wish it was like that everywhere. So, thank you, arts-X-press." Student
- "It seemed like there was a part of her confidence that was unlocked after arts-X-Press. She had so many opportunities to express herself and it seems like it made her sense of self stronger." arts-X-press parent
- "arts-X-press was a great opportunity. I could do anything, and no one would be there to judge. I learned a lot, especially about new music. Thank you." Student
- "I felt that my greatest accomplishment this summer was the confidence that being a counselor gave me. At the end of the summer I was so incredibly proud of the person arts-X-press had allowed me to become. Going into the week I was so anxious and filled with uncertainty regarding how the week was going to go. I was so nervous about working with the kids and pushing myself to be an inspiring counselor but found such pride in myself through the great friendships I formed with the other counselors and campers and the risks that I pushed myself to take." Counselor

- Jocelyne
 - Now a counselor with the program
 - An aspiring conductor, she never believed she would meet and have conversation with someone like Carl St.Clair
- Kole
 - Before arts-X-press had no place to comfortably explore his artistic interests
 - Liked to perform musical theater but found it difficult to connect with peers since most of the boys were focused on sports
 - Enabled him to make friends with other kids with passion for the arts
 - Provided positive environment for him to discover new art forms
 - Mother's comment, "He came back just more mature, more confident. He was really respectful to his family and his grandparents in terms of understanding all of the sacrifices that we make for him to have the opportunities to do what he does...It was really amazing. I didn't think it was going to be as impactful as it was."
- Haylay
 - "My path to finding the person I am today was influenced by Pacific Symphony's arts-X-press program...I attended the camp the summer before my eighth grade. Before then, I had never considered myself to be particularly outgoing or extroverted...That summer I learned about individuality.

There was so much diversity at the camp that week, I realized later that diversity and variety is a beautiful privilege. I was one of fifty kids there, all about twelve years old. We were all from different schools, different social classes and just about every race, religion and ethnicity you can think of. Yet we all performed together, sang together, laughed together; we all loved art together and did not let our differences divide us. Now I recognize that everyone comes from a different background. Simple acceptance of others and their ideas creates a friendly environment and ultimately bonds people together in mutual understanding.

I sang in a group of fifty middle school kids...and danced in a massive crowd of kids...I knew I had already become a better version of myself.

Since I turned sixteen, I have gone back to that camp every year as a counselor."

- Emily
 - High school senior and arts-X-press counselor
- "I came in going into seventh grade and was starting a new school and I had no social skills. I was so uncomfortable. But this program changed me and made me realize I had to come and give back."
- Amrit

- High school senior and arts-X-press counselor
- "I remember thinking as a camper, 'I'm going to bring all this piano sheet music' and I get there, and I'm placed in visual arts. But you just learn to get a bigger appreciation for arts as a whole and then realize that you're capable of more than you think you are.
- It would be awesome for every kid to understand that if it's not hard, it's probably not worth going for. You should stretch yourself, you should try and make yourself uncomfortable, and that's where you are going to find success."

Testimonials

- Sean - age 15
 - First experience with music at his elementary school, Adelaide Price Elementary, a Title I School in Anaheim
 - Was the only school-wide music education at the school
 - Became interested in performing music himself
 - Parents enrolled him in music lessons for guitar, trumpet and voice
 - Now a high school student, he performs in ensembles and fundraises annually to support music education in Anaheim
 - Sean gets to play music as a Mouseketeer in the revamped Mickey Mouse Club with Disney
 - Sees his photo rolling on the big billboards of Time Square when they announced the cast
 - From father, "I shared the amazing program, Class Act, with people on the Disney set and how it expanded Sean's world through music...you carry the legacy of making a difference in kids' lives. This many years later, the impact of Class Act still matters."
- Teacher - Los Alamitos Elementary School

- “During my years as a classroom teacher, I saw first-hand how the Symphony’s programs affected family life. Families in a very economically disadvantaged neighborhood were listening to classical music stations. Many children began taking music lessons...I witnessed the goals of the program happening before my very eyes.”

Testimonials

"Thank you so much for the opportunity to take my parents to the Tribute to Ella Fitzgerald concert. I knew that my mother would enjoy it, and even be filled with nostalgia as she had seen Ella live back in the 1950's, but I never could have foreseen my father's reaction. My father has been diagnosed with dementia, and in recent years his memory and behavior have been erratic. Thinking on his joy at the concert still brings tears to my eyes, though. Days later, he is still so pleased with himself that he remembers so many of the lyrics to Ella's songs. Thank you so much." – Victoria Moss, Savanna School District

"My son who has autism has been inspired to start playing an instrument. After seeing the Pacific Symphony perform a couple times during the latter part of the 2016-17 season, he began lessons this summer and is now playing double bass in his Niguel Hills Middle School 8th grade orchestra. He practices 2-3 hours per day, and LOVES it...and I do, too! It has changed our lives!" – AgeWell, Mozart & Rachmaninoff participant

The Center for Autism and Neurodevelopmental Disorders, Serving Children on the Autism Spectrum and Their Families

Program Goals

- Provide access and opportunity to hear Pacific Symphony musicians in a safe and comfortable setting
- Provide an updated location with both seating to listen as well as a separate movement area
- Provide educational opportunities regarding instruments and composers through handouts as well as visually during the concert
- Engage and teach children the aspects of musical learning
- Provide opportunities for siblings and whole families to experience the music, musicians and instruments
- Improve regulation and reduce stress

- Improve verbal skills and oral expression
- Learn importance of play for development
- Improve non-verbal communication and bonding
- Support and meet neurodevelopment markers
- Provide opportunities for creativity and self-expression

Program Activities

- One-of-a-kind multi-sensory experience for autistic children and their families
- Partner – The Center for Autism and Neurodevelopment Disorders
- Symphony musicians perform
- Sessions conclude with “petting zoo” – participants encouraged to touch and play the instruments under guidance of Symphony musician
- 269 participants attended Symphony concerts (2017-2018)
- 86% of parents indicated they feel confident they can attend a Pacific Symphony concert with their child
- 100% of participants agreed the program provided a safe environment for their children to experience the Symphony

Testimonials

- Heather – parent of sons with autism
 - “I always knew that we would get adjusted and find a “new normal,” but didn’t know exactly what that meant. I would see my friends on Facebook and become really sad as they were doing a lot of really exciting things with their children and I wanted that for my children and it made me feel bad for wanting those things. In fact, it has been something I have struggled with a lot since they were diagnosed.

When we decided to go to the Pacific Symphony event at the Center for Autism and Neurodevelopmental Disorders, I figured that it would be nice to get out and try something new, but I was fully anticipating that my boys would have meltdowns and could at the very least be accepted in our needing to exit five minutes into the performance. Well, to my surprise, the boys not only made it past the five minutes I anticipated, they were engaged the entire performance.

My son Jacob was wildly swinging his legs and arms around with joy, while my son Frankie was clapping his hands, both with a huge grin on their face. As parents, my husband and I got to relax and enjoy ourselves while our kids were experiencing pure joy. Never does this happen simultaneously.

As if that weren’t enough, we were part of the autism community that night. Our kids were free to be themselves. I didn’t have to walk around explaining their behavior to everyone, chase them around, worry about them, or cry when I got home. It was a very loving and supportive environment. It also allowed us the opportunity to get a glimpse into our future with autism. I'm no longer afraid of the "new normal." My children are different, but that doesn't mean we have to forfeit joy in this life.

Thanks to the Pacific Symphony and the Center for Autism and Neurodevelopment, I have so much joy and hope for what future we have yet to uncover and the excitement that we will share as an autistic family."

- Don – head of private family foundation supporting the Autism Center
 - "The work you and your musicians are doing at the Autism Center is truly transforming to families and children with disabilities...I am constantly reminded of the challenges these families face and with people like you and your team of 'musician therapists,' you are making a real difference...You are inspiring families and providing so much hope and help."
- Dr. Mott – pediatric neurologist at the Center for Autism
 - "The influence of superb music on the children was amazing, from their wild dancing, spontaneous active scripting of a Star Wars scene, even intense rocking prompted by the program. [I saw] the smiles of relaxed parents watching their children really enjoy themselves."

PACIFIC SYMPHONY EDUCATION and COMMUNITY ENGAGEMENT PROGRAMS

Life-Long Learning

STRINGS FOR GENERATIONS

Goals

- To provide high-quality music instruction in a non-competitive environment and to provide opportunities for students to learn about music from many different cultures
- To deepen familial and peer relationships
- To enrich student's instrumental music education, while providing opportunities for adults to develop or rekindle an interest in music-making

Requirements

- Youth must play a string instrument (violin, viola, cello or bass) in their own school music program
- Youth must have an adult family member who can also participate either in strings or rhythm
- String instrumentalists must be able to read music and play excerpt included in application

Program Description

- Partnership with Irvine Chinese School and South Coast Chinese Cultural Center made possible through the James Irvine Foundation's New California Arts Fund
- Intergenerational orchestra featuring rising musicians from 4th- 9th grade and their parents for families to play and learn about music under the direction of professional music educators and Symphony musicians

Program Activities

- Weekly rehearsals for students and parents – multi-generational string orchestra and parent percussion ensemble
- Multiple performing opportunities, including
 - Lantern Festival
 - Irvine Chinese School's New Year Celebration
 - Concordia University
 - Jewish Community Center

Impacts

- Prior to this program, Irvine Chinese School did not offer instrumental music
- As a result, the school began its own Chinese instrument orchestra in 2017
- Parent interviews revealed

- Growth in musical knowledge for them and their children (even those with extensive musical backgrounds)
- Contact with Symphony musicians and staff added value to their own experience making and listening to music
- Increased interest in other Symphony youth programs
- Changes in both children’s and parents’ attitudes toward music
 - Children previously unmotivated to practice became more excited to practice and encouraged their parents to do so as well
 - Parents who thought they could not learn music or keep up with the class as adult learners changed their perspective
- 2018-2019 Reports Indicate:
 - 43 participants
 - 100% experiencing the joys of music making
 - 81% feel more connected

Testimonial

“My daughter and I loved this program! Previously, we never experienced a collaborative musical project together—guided by such high-quality instruction. Sharing the experience of learning and performing music with my daughter made it easier for me to appreciate the effort and also the joy in learning music. My daughter tremendously enjoyed playing with me, has increased her love of music, and values my input more when she practices during the week. This is a wonderful program that has brought us even closer together.” —Strings for Generations Parent

Participant Fees

- Pacific Symphony and Irvine Chinese School Rely upon fees to help cover the cost of materials including percussion instruments, music, facilities and high quality music instruction
- Early Registration cost: $460
- Registration Fee: $480

WILLIAM J. GILLESPIE CONCERT ORGAN

Origin

- Donated as a gift by William J. Gillespie
- Built by C. B. Fisk of Gloucester, Massachusetts

Gillespie Organ Statistics

- 4 manual keyboards (called manuals) of 61 notes each
- 1-foot keyboard of 32 notes
- 4,322 pipes
- 57 voices
- 75 ranks
- Size – 40 feet wide, 48 feet high, 12 feet deep
- Winded by electric blowers totaling 12 horsepower

General Information

- Organs are free-standing or built-in instruments
- Built-in are generally designed individually for each customer
- Built-in – generally attached to the building
- The blower supplies the wind and is unseen

Terms

- Pipe – produces sound (“speak”) when air under pressure (“wind”) is directed through them. One pipe produces a single pitch; multiple pipes are necessary to accommodate the musical scale
 - This is unlike other orchestral instruments like flutes or trumpets which can produce multiple pitches through the keys on the instrument – there are no keys or holes in the pipes of the organ to control the pitch.
 - An organ’s pitch is determined by the length of the pipe.
- Pitch – sounds judged to be “higher” and “lower” in the sense associated with musical melodies; determined in a frequency that is clear and stable enough to be distinguished from noise
 - Is the “note” that sounds
- Rank – a row of pipes; each rank having all pipes of the same kind of sound (i.e., flute-type instrument sounds)
- Console – Visible part of the organ containing everything the organist needs to control the sound, such as the manuals (keyboards, pedal board, stops, etc.)

How an Organ Produces Sound

- Sound is produced when wind passes through the pipes.
- Motor blows air into a reservoir (a storage container for the wind)
 - Top part of the reservoir is expandable (like a fan or accordion)

- Weights or springs on the expandable part keep the air under pressure so the sound does not waver
- From the reservoir, wind goes into the wind-chest – a box of rows with holes on the top
- Pipes stand on top of the wind-chest, one pipe to a hole
- Wind moves from the wind-chest to the pipe to make the pipe “speak”
- If the holes connecting the pipes to the wind-chest remained open all the time, all the pipes would speak at once whenever the organ is turned on – making “noise.”
- Two mechanisms control two separate barriers to the flow of air from the wind-chest to the pipes.
 - Stop Action
 - Controlled by tabs (draw knobs)
 - When a “stop” is turned off, the barrier blocks the holes.
 - By pulling the stop out (or “on”) the wind can get to the pipes.
 - There is a separate “stop action” for each stop in the organ.
 - Barriers to several sounds can be removed simultaneously, allowing several pipes to speak at once when only one note is played.
 - There are five broad categories of stops
 - Principal (Diapason) stops –
 - Do not try to imitate sounds of particular instruments
 - Sound is unique to the pipe organ – what you think of when you hear traditional church music
 - Flute stops – imitate sounds of flute-class of woodwind instruments, such as flute or piccolo, etc.
 - String stops – imitate sounds of stringed instruments, such as violins, violas, cellos, etc.
 - Reed stops – imitate sounds of brass instruments such as trumpets and tubas and reed instruments such as clarinets, saxophones and oboes, and even the human voice
 - Hybrid stops – attempt to combine tone qualities of two other classifications of stops
 - Key Action
 - Works with the stop action
 - After a stop is turned on (removing barrier to the holes), the key action can control wind flow into the pipe.
 - When a key is depressed, it opens a valve beneath the pipe, so the wind can finally get through the hole in the wind-chest.
 - If no stops are open, there will be no sound.
 - While the wind supply, stop action, and key action have many parts, most of the space in the organ is occupied by the pipes

SOCIETAL AND OTHER BENEFITS OF ORCHESTRAL MUSIC

Music is as old as human kind – and universal.

Thousands of studies have proven the impact of music on human emotions, the ability to learn, impacting health and general well-being, and a society's culture. Some known societal and other benefits of music are listed here, all the results of bone fide scientific studies.

Academic Outcomes

- Music education prepares students to learn – develops basic mental skills
 - Enhances fine motor skills – ability to use small, acute muscle movements to write, use a computer, perform other physical activities needed for classroom learning
 - Parts of the brain associated with sensory and motor function are developed through music instruction
 - Musically trained children have better motor function than non-musically trained children
 - Prepares the brain for achievement
 - Part of the brain used in processing math are strengthened through music practice
 - Students taking music score significantly higher on algebra and math assessments
 - Music students' brains are already accustomed to performing the processes used in complex math
 - Fosters superior working memory
 - Ability to hold, control and manipulate information in order to complete higher order tasks, such as reasoning and problem solving
 - Musicians found to have superior working memory compared to non-musicians
 - Musicians better able to sustain mental control during memory and recall tasks
 - Cultivates better thinking skills and abstract reasoning
 - Improve over time with sustained training in music
- Music education facilitates student academic achievement – improves overall scholastic success
 - Improves recall and retention of verbal information
 - Develops region of the brain responsible for verbal memory – the recall and retention of spoken words
 - Serves as foundation for retaining information in all academic subjects
 - Music students tested for verbal memory show superior recall for words compared to non-music students
 - Advances math achievement
 - Music students outperform non-music peers in assessment of math
 - The advantage that music provides increases over time

- True regardless of socio-economic status, race or ethnicity
 - Students in instrumental music do better in algebra, a gateway for later achievement
 - Boosts reading and English language arts
 - Students studying music surpass non-music students in assessments of writing, using information sources, reading and responding, and proofreading
 - Gains increase over time
 - Increases average SAT scores
 - SAT – measures “readiness for college”
 - 10 years of SAT data reveals
 - Students with four years of arts courses in high school earned highest scores on both the verbal and math SAT
 - Students taking any arts courses scored significantly higher than students who took no arts courses
 - Of those students, those who took music courses earned the highest math and second highest verbal SAT scores
- Music education develops creative capacities for lifelong success – engagement, persistence, creativity are components of higher-level thinking and complex problem solving essential for success in today’s global, knowledge-based economy
 - Sharpens student attentiveness
 - Ability to pay attention
 - Visual focus, active listening, staying on task – essential to school performance
 - Early childhood training in instrumental music improves these abilities
 - Continued music education through adolescence reinforces and strengthens them
 - Strengthens perseverance
 - Ability to continue towards a goal when presented with obstacles
 - Developed and strengthened in music education
 - Students involved in music lessons surpass their peers on tasks measuring perseverance – motivation, commitment and persistence
 - Equips students to be creative
 - Employers identify creativity as one of the top five skills important for success in the workforce
 - Music education helps develop originality and flexibility – key components of creativity and innovation
 - Graduates from music programs report that creativity, teamwork, communication and critical thinking skills are necessary in their work, regardless of whether they are working in music or other fields
 - Supports better study habits and self-esteem
 - Studies show music majors feel more prepared for success in college than non-music majors

- May be due to music majors' discipline and focus developed through intense practice and performance routines prior to college
- These habits generalize to other academic and social aspects of life, contributing to high self-esteem and success

Alzheimer's - an irreversible, progressive brain disorder that slowly destroys memory and thinking skills, and eventually the ability to carry out the simplest tasks. In most people with Alzheimer's, symptoms first appear in their mid-60s.

- Musical memories are often preserved in Alzheimer's disease patients because key brain areas linked to musical memory are relatively undamaged by the disease
- Consequently, music can
 - Relieve or reduce stress
 - Reduce anxiety and depression
 - Reduce agitation
 - Enhance recall, language skills
 - Decrease problem, agitated or aggressive behaviors
- MRI images of the brain show different reactions to speech versus song
 - Spoken words activate just one section of the brain
 - Melodies light up multiple regions of the brain
 - Studies have demonstrated that Alzheimer's patients learned more song lyrics when they were set to music than just spoken; healthy elderly people remembered just as much and did just as well with or without music.
 - New studies that Alzheimer's patients can actually learn new information using music
- Favorite or meaningful songs from a person's past may ease depression, anxiety, apathy, agitation and other conditions
 - Also eases stress for care-givers

Autism - a developmental disorder characterized by troubles with social interaction and communication. Often there is also restricted and repetitive behavior. Parents usually notice signs in the first two or three years of their child's life.

- Behaviors associated with Autism
 - Delayed learning of language
 - Difficulty making eye contact or holding a conversation
 - Difficulty relating to reasoning and planning
 - Narrow, intense interests
 - Poor motor skills
 - Sensory sensitivities
- Individuals with autism show equal or superior abilities in pitch processing, labeling of emotions in music, and musical preference when compared to typically developing peers.
- Melodic and rhythmic patterns give students with autism a way to organize auditory information and help memorize scripts, task sequences, and academic facts.

- Research supports a link between musical therapy and improvement in those with autism
 - Significant gains in communications behaviors; commensurate decreases when music therapy was removed
 - Preschool children in early intervention music therapy program show high on-task behavior during sessions and a high success rate in language development, social skills, cognitive concepts, motor skills, and music knowledge
 - Improvement in word recognition, logo identification, print concepts and pre-writing skills of children in early intervention programs.
 - Greater text accuracy when song is paired to text rather than reading or speaking text alone
 - Increase in vocabulary
Increase in learning and retention of numbers, such as telephone numbers, multiplication tables when set to music than through non-music presentation
Improved social skills through music-facilitated interactions and instrument playing
 - Long-term improved problem-solving skills.
 - Enhanced social skills such as entering the classroom, greeting teacher and peers, and engaging in play
 - Decreased self-stimulation and agitation
- Rhythmic impact of music
 - Organizes physical movements and is related to body rhythms (heartbeat, breathing, etc.)
 - Example: Autistic boy could not tie his shoes; learning on the second try when tying his shoes was put to a song. The rhythm helped organize his physical movements in time.

Some General Comments

- Various forms of music have different impacts
 - Can have positive or negative impacts
 - May change a person's mood
 - May impact many people simultaneously
 - Can affect breathing rates, electrical resistance of the skin; cause pupils to dilate, increase in blood pressure and heart rate
- Example - Classical music from the baroque period
 - Causes heart beat and pulse rate to relax to beat of the music
 - Enables mind to concentrate more easily
 - Decreases blood pressure
 - Enhances ability to learn
 - Stimulates left and right brain
 - Information being studied stimulates left brain
 - Music activates the right brain

- Engaging both sides at the same time causes the brain to be more capable of processing information
- Example – Link between muscle strength/weakness and music
 - Muscles in the entire body go weak when subjected to the “stopped anapestic beat” of hard rock musicians such as Led Zeppelin, Queen, Janis Joplin, and others
 - A “twitching of the brain”
 - Effects include lessened work performance, learning and behavior problems in children and a “general malaise” in adults
 - Shrill frequencies are also harmful
- The power of music
 - Students who study music
 - Have higher grade point averages than students who don’t
 - Develop faster physically
 - Have improved listening skills
 - Top three academic countries in the world emphasize music education and participation
 - Hungary, Japan, Netherlands
 - Top engineers in Silicon Valley are musicians

Historical Anecdotes

- Thomas Jefferson
 - When writing Declaration of Independence and could not figure out the wording for a specific part, would play his violin to help him think
 - Landlady in Philadelphia recorded in her journal
 - Heard him pacing upstairs while drafting Declaration
 - Sent home for one of his violins
 - After it arrived, she would hear him pace a little, then play for half an hour or so and pacing would stop
 - As youth, practiced violin (sometimes cello) 3 hours per day
 - Participated in weekly concerts at Governor’s Palace while a student at Williamsburg
 - Owned several violins – one “portable”
 - Purchased pianoforte for future wife – Martha Wayles Skelton – during their engagement
 - Involved with music all his life
 - Declared that music “is the favorite passion of my soul, and fortune has cast my lot in a country where it is in a state of deplorable barbarism.”
- Albert Einstein
 - Began learning violin at age 6 (Mother was accomplished pianist), but he hated it
 - Began to love violin and music at age 13 when he discovered Mozart
 - Was poor student
 - Some thought he might be retarded

- Many, including some in family, thought he should become a laborer
- He resisted what he called “rote learning” – it excluded the real spirit of learning and creative thought
- At age 12, he discovered, was fascinated by geometry; mastered calculus by 16
- Formal education ended at 16 – expelled because his bad attitude was affecting his classmates
- Failed entrance exam to Federal Institute of Technology (FIT) in Zurich – good in math, but not other subjects; continued other studies, then was admitted to FIT in 1896
- For Einstein, insight did not come from logic or mathematics
 - It came, as it does for artists, from intuition and inspiration
 - “The greatest scientists are artists as well.” said Albert Einstein
 - “If I were not a physicist, I would probably be a musician. I often think in music. I live my daydreams in music. I see my life in terms of music...”
 - “Imagination is more important than knowledge.”
- He played classical music (on violin or piano) as a brainstorming technique.
 - “When I examine myself and my methods of thought, I come close to the conclusion that the gift of imagination has meant more to me than any talent for absorbing absolute knowledge.”
 - “All great achievements of science must start from intuitive knowledge. I believe in intuition and inspiration.... At times I feel certain I am right while not knowing the reason.”
- Second wife, Elsa, “He goes to his study, comes back, strikes a few chords on the piano, jots something down, and returns to his study.”
- For nearly seven decades, Einstein would not only use the violin to relax, but also when he became stuck in his thinking process.
- Einstein to Shinichi Suzuki (pioneer of musical education): “The theory of relativity occurred to me by intuition, and music is the driving force behind this intuition. My parents had me study the violin from the time I was six. My new discovery is the result of musical perception.”

Music focused Books

- What to Listen for in Music by Aaron Copland, Alan Rich (Foreword and Epilogue) and William Schuman (introduction)
 - This book looks to answer two basic questions: Are you hearing everything that is going on? Are you really being sensitive to it? Through these two questions Copland discusses what to listen for when listening to Duke Ellington to Bach. Through his dialogue and point of view readers can glean another way to appreciate listening to music.
- The Rest is Noise: Listening to the Twentieth Century by Alex Ross
 - This book shows readers the complex world of modern sound. It discusses bold personalities who have resisted the precedents of the classical past and defied cultural norms. This narrative takes you from Vienna in the 1940's to the center of New York during the 70's exploring the bold defiance of classical music dying and instead allowing it to prosper. This book discusses history through music.

- The Lives of the Great Composers by Harold C. Schonberg
 - This narrative discusses the greats as unique yet evolving and adapting composers that learn from the past. Schonberg looks to Bach, Mozart, and Copland but also looks to Gilbert, Sullivan and Strauss providing a work full of details and anecdotes.

- The Classical Style by Charles Rosen
 - Rosen delves into the three giants of the Vienna School of Music during the Classical-era of music drawing from his vast knowledge of their repertoire. All of his insights are clear and persuasive, shining a new light on these magnificent works.
- This is Your Brain on Music: The Science of Human Obsession by Daniel J. Levitin
 - Levitin explores the connection between music and the human brain posing the theory the music is essential to human evolution – possibly more so than language. He discusses everything from the science of earworm jingles, to why practice not talent makes better musicians and inclinations to certain types of music. This is an eye opening work interconnecting obsession, the human brain and music.

GREAT MUSIC QUOTES

"Music is a birthright."

Carl St.Clair

"Give me control over he who shapes the music of a nation, and I care not who makes the laws."

Napoleon Bonaparte

"A painter paints pictures on canvas. But musicians paint their pictures on silence."

Leopold Stokowski

"If a composer could say what he had to say in words, he would not bother trying to say it in music."

Gustav Mahler

"If the king loves music, it is well with the land."

Mencius

"Life is one grand, sweet song, so start the music."

Ronald Reagan

"Music is the universal language of mankind."

Henry Wadsworth Longfellow

"Music is the mediator between the spiritual and the sensual life."

Ludwig van Beethoven

"Music is well said to be the speech of angels."

Thomas Carlyle

"Music produces a kind of pleasure which human nature cannot do without."

Confucius

"When words fail, music speaks."

Hans Christian Anderson

"Why waste money on psychotherapy when you can listen to the B Minor Mass?"

Michael Torke

"Music without life would be a mistake."

Friedrich Nietzsche

"After silence, that which comes closest to expressing the inexpressible is music."

Aldous Huxley

"Music expresses that which cannot be said and on which it is impossible to be silent."

Victor Hugo

"Music is love in search of a word."

Sidney Lanier

"I must study politics and war that my sons may have liberty to study mathematics and philosophy. My sons ought to study mathematics and philosophy, geography, natural history, naval architecture, navigation, commerce and agriculture in order to give their children the right to study painting, poetry, music, architecture, statuary, tapestry and porcelain."

John Adams

Play the music, not the instrument.

Music is what feelings sound like.

Music is only love looking for words.

Music is the art of thinking with sounds.

Music speaks to the heart in ways words cannot express.

Music is to the soul what words are to the mind.

If the brain is a muscle, then learning to play an instrument and read music is the ultimate exercise.
